It was a German girl named Anneliese Michel, who was treated for kidnappings and was given drugs for a period of five years before the Church finally authorized an exorcism; his investigation indicates that he was owned by, among others, Lucifer, Judas, Nero, Cain, and Hitler. ^ Compare video and exorcism Further readings Goodman, Felicitas D. When the care of the family doctor and various psychiatrists did not help her, the bishop of her diocese gave permission to two priests to perform the ritual of exorcism. She was unable to move without assistance and Â" was reported to have contracted pneumonia[14]. After an investigation, the State Attorney argued that Michel's death could have been avoided even a week before his death[18]. In 1976, the state accused the parents and priests of Michel Ernst Alt and Arnold Renz of manslaughter[19]. The parents were defended by Erich Schmidt-Leichner; their lawyers were sponsored by the Church[19]. The State recommended that none of the parties involved should be imprisoned; instead, the recommended sentence for priests was a fine, while the prosecution concluded that parents should be exempted from the sentence because they had "suffered enough", [19][18] which Â" a criterion in German criminal law, cf.
